Proceedings Of Council Meeting.

At the last meeting of the City Council there was a full board present with Mayor O'Brien presiding. The following business was transacted: Mayor O'Brien laid before the Council a petition from residents on Fifteenth and Cypress streets asking for the passage of an ordinance requiring concrete pavements laid on Fifteenth and the west side of Cypress street, from Twelfth street to the city limits. City Attorney William Grannon was present and drew an ordinance in conformity with the request which passed its first reading. The ordinance when passed will be effective at once, the concrete walks being required laid within a period of ninety days. Owners on the streets mentioned, who now have brick pavements will be exempt from the operations of the ordinance. The following building permits were granted:

R. J. Neely a one story residence on Maysville street, costing $1,000.

G. W. Judy a two story residence Telfth street, $2,500.

J. H. Moreland residence Main and Sixteenth streets, $1,500.

Belle Hill, addition, Williams street, $500.

L. Allen, addition, corner Main and Fourteenth streets, $500.

Nick Nagle, 1 story residence, Vine street, $1,000.

George Kimbrough, cottage, Higgins Avenue, $700.

Report of Police Court proceedings showed total fines for month of July, $98.50.

Claims against the city to the amount of $645.39 were approved and warrants upon the City Treasurer ordered drawn. Of the above amount $264.88 was for light during the month of July, $44.07 for city prisoners, and $1.28 for charity.

It pays sick and death benefits, has an orphan's home containing 240 acres of land, near Louisville, and owns a lodge building in Paris valued at several thousand dollars. The session will close with a mammoth picnic at the new fair grounds near Paris Friday.

Much discussion was indulged in as to the advisability of securing free attractions for the week of the fair and the committee on amusements was instructed to secure the best available, and if possible make arrangements with a first-class carnival company who carry their own electric lighting plant, so as to be able to give exhibitions both afternoon and evening.

The appointment of men to manage and conduct the fair were made and are as follows: Ticket sellers, Harvey Hibler, Louis Kriener, Jos. Quisenberry, Bev. Dorsey and June Stone. Ticket takers, S. B. ## Bourbon's Pioneer Carriage Builder Dead.

William H. Settle, aged 78, died at his residence near North Middletown, Friday morning at 5 o'clock, of Bright's disease. Mr. Settle was born in Bourbon county, July 11, 1829. His grandfather, Joseph Settle, was a native of Virginia and migrated to Kentucky contemporaneously with Daniel Boone. He settled in Bourbon where he raised a large family, John T. Settle, father of the deceased, being born August, 1806.

His mother, Mary Shrader Settle, was a second cousin of Daniel Boone, and lived to be nearly eighty years of age.

The deceased was married in 1854 to Lucinda Gardner who survived, with two sons, Robert Settle, of Mt. Sterling, and Edward Settle of the firm of Holliday & Settle, Carriage manufacturers, of this city, and one daughter, Mrs. Lizzie Wright of Sedalia, Mo.

Mr. Settle was the pioneer carriage builder of the county, conducting a manufactory at North Middletown before the war, but later moved to Mt. Sterling.

He gave up the active pursuits of life a number of years ago purchasing the old Seamonds farm, one and one-half miles south of North Middletown. Mr. Settle is survived by three brothers, John Settle, of Stamping Ground, Frank and Joseph Settle, of Missouri, and one sister, Mrs. Mary Stivers, of this city.

The funeral services were held at the grave in Macpelah cemetery at Mt. Sterling, at 2 o'clock p. m. Sunday, services by Elder Clark.

Louisville To Have A Primary.

The Democratic City and County Executive Committee, at Louisville, have issued a call for a primary election for September 24 to nominate a ticket to be voted for at the November election. In the call, rules are laid down which will insure a fair and square deal to all who may enter the races for the Democratic nominations.

As has always been the rule in primary elections in Louisville, all candidates who will enter will be required to make oath that they will support the ticket nominated. The eligibility clause provides that all registered Democrats may vote in the primary, and also who are registered as independents, provided they make oath to support the straight Democratic ticket, State and local.

Gen. Hays To Leave Kentucky.

Attorney General Hays is making arrangements for an extended trip through several Western States with a view to locating permanently at some desirable point when his term of office expires this fall. It is said that following his disappointment in the gubernatorial primary last November he determined to remove from Kentucky and has since confided to a number of friends that he desires to go West to make his home.

He has expressed a keen interest in the new State of Oklahoma and his friends believe that he will eventually decide to cast his fortunes there. Gen. Hays has repeatedly stated that he intends to support the Democratic ticket in the election this fall and hopes to see it elected by a splendid majority.

Big Land Deal.

Mrs. Brodie Duke Friday purchased from Pride & Day, 56,000 acres of coal and timber lands in Rowan and Morgan counties for a consideration of $280,000. Mrs. Duke was on the verge of purchasing the property a year ago when she had trouble with her husband, the American Tobacco Company man, which finally culminated in a divorce. Senator J. Strickland and W. H. Briggs, of New York, are in the deal. Mrs. Duke is at Beaumont, Texas, and the deal was closed by telegram.

Charles B. Culberson.

The Southern man whose name is most likely to be presented as a candidate for the Presidency before the next Democratic National Convention is Charles A. Culberson, a United States Senator from Texas. He is the son of the late David B. Culberson, who was a Representative in Congress from Texas for twenty-two years, and was for a long time Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. The family was prominent in Georgia during the first half of the 19th century. But David Culberson removed to Texas in the 50's. Charles A. Culberson was born in Dadeville, Ala., June 10, 1855. While a child he went with his father to Texas, where he has since resided; his present home being Dallas. He graduated from the Virginia Military Institute in 1874, and then studied law for two years at the University of Virginia. In 1890 he was elected Attorney-General of Texas, and was re-elected in 1892; was elected Governor of Texas in 1894 and 1896; and succeeded Roger Q. Mills, as Senator from Texas, in 1899.

In every position of public trust which he has held, Mr. Culberson has exhibited tact, ability and an earnest devotion to his duty. In the great struggle over the railroad rate bill in the spring of 1906, Mr. Culberson took a very prominent part. The Culberson amendment intended to secure the people against injunctions granted by Federal Courts suspending the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was supported by every Democrat in the Senate except Bailey, of Texas, and Patterson, of Colorado. It also received the support of Senator La Follette. In the debates on the rate bill he spoke often; and his speeches were so replete with sound principles, so fair to all legitimate interests, and yet so powerful and earnest in advancing Home Rule and reserve rights of the States and people of the Union, that the Democrats began to look to him for leadership in the great struggle of the people against predatory corporations and usurping Federal Courts.

A Conspicuous Figure.

Judge Kenesaw M. Landis is a conspicuous figure at this moment—conspicuous because, in a proceeding pending in his court, he had the courage to impose the extreme penalty against history's greatest pirate on the sea of commerce.

It is true that fines are not adequate to meet the situation for the reason that the criminals can often afford to pay the fines for the privilege of continuing the violation of the law. Some have expressed the hope that Judge Landis would not impose the maximum fine because they feared the oil trust would merely increase the price to the consumers and make them pay the enormous fines even as they have been required to pay the "generous" contributions made by Mr. Rockefeller to educational funds. But Judge Landis had nothing to do with that theory and it is well he imposed the maximum figure.

It is more than likely that the oil trust will shift the burden to the consumers, but this will only aid in the crystallization of that public sentiment that will be expressed so forcefully that men in authority will cease to trifle with the violations of anti-trust laws and will vigorously enforce that criminal law which provides for the imprisonment of the arrogant monopolist even as a common rogue is imprisoned.

Good for Landis. And now let us have—just as a beginning—a few prosecutions under the criminal clause of the Sherman anti-trust law.

Corporation Statesmen.

Another enterprising Republican statesman, Senator Du Pont, of Delaware, is said to be in danger of being indicted for criminally conspiring to restrict trade in his connection with the Powder trust. But if all the Republican United States Senators who are connected with corporations are prosecuted—which is not at all likely to occur under Republican auspices—it would break the quorum of the Senate. There is Guggenheimer, Aldrich—but what is the good of naming them, the people of each State know their own black sheep, and some of them persist in keeping these Representatives of corporations and trusts where they can to the most harm.

Simple Proposition.

The Baltimore Sun gives the American citizen something to think about when it says:

"The president has been 'trust-busting' for seven years, and if any private citizen in this whole broad land has received any benefit from his exertions—if the price of any one of trust-made article has been reduced by the 'trust-busting' which has so delighted the country—then the market reports do not disclose the fact. Naaman, the Syrian, rejected the prophet's receipt for curing his leprosy because it was too simple. It was only to wash and be clean. He demanded something spectacular. He wanted Elisha to come out to him and stand and call upon the name of the Lord and strike his hand over the place. And so the real cure of the monopoly that is afflicting the country is too simple to impress the public. What is monopoly? It is the absence of competition. Then why not, in the name of reason and common sense, take down the bars and let competition enter? A great fine may be imposed upon the Standard Oil Company. But what will that avail? It will simply result in a higher price for oil, and so the people will lose instead of finding relief in that kind of 'trust-busting.' If the sugar trust is exacting 'an unfair price for sugar, why not let the German refineries compete with them? If the tobacco trust maintains high prices why not let Cuba compete with it? This is not only too simple, but it would be too effective. The people who are standing pat on the tariff do not want the trusts curbed."

Why He's A Democrat?

John H. Bankhead, the new Senator from Alabama, says that he is a Democrat, and gives his reasons for it, and very good reasons they are. In his speech before the Legislature he said he was a Democrat because he believed in the greatest personal liberty consistent with the rights and privileges of others; because he believed in home rule and the rights of the State to regulate its own affairs without interference or dictation from the National government; because he believed in equal and exact justice to all persons and interests; because he was opposed to a high protective tariff which enriched the few at the expense of the masses, and was the parent of trusts and monopolies. He also expressed himself in no uncertain terms as opposed to government ownership of railroads, which he denounced as a menace to the life of a nation.

A Democrat Of Renown.

The nomination at the primaries in Mississippi of Hon. John Sharp Williams as the candidate for United States Senator shows that the Democrats of Mississippi appreciate one of the most able honest and industrious public servants that either party can boast of. Those of us who have the good fortune to come in contact with him in his position as the Democratic leader of the House of Representatives can only hope that his successor in that position will as ably advocate Democratic issues and so completely confound Republican fallacies as he has done. In the more sedate Senate he will be a light to lighten the Republican patriots by his great learning and ability to impart his knowledge in good strong English, polished by contact with the best of the world produces.

Former Senator Carmack declares that he would sooner be a Justice of the Peace, or School Commissioner with something to do than Vice President who has nothing to do but look wise and draw his salary. The friends of Senator Carmack think he of presidential calibre, and if he would say the word declare they would give him the vote of Tennessee in the National Democratic Convention.

Secretary Root, "the only smart man in the Cabinet," virtually confesses he is at his wit's end to enforce the trust protecting tariff, without serious disagreement with foreign countries. For he has had to resurrect an old statute that allows the President to bar out foreign goods of nations that discriminate against us. It that law is put into effect, up will go trust prices again.

ARTICLE VI.

(G. W. Chapman.)

Besides preparing one to make money, education fits him to enjoy. It is the mind that feels, that knows, that loves, that hates, that enjoys. Education develops this mind, increases its powers, broadens its views and makes the individual larger and more capable to enjoy the world and all it contains. To enjoy, one must know, must understand. The untrained mind knows little and can only enjoy in proportion to what it knows. The world is seeking happiness. Some seek it in one way, and some another, but few in the right way. The preacher will tell you to seek happiness in religion and he is right. Eliminate the religious element from our education and it will not be worth much. But we do not count on taking out the religious element. Indeed it is the most important of all the many phases of the child's education. It is the basis of all morality. Eliminate the moral teaching from our educational system, and the result would be little better than ignorance. Secularism is forbidden in our schools as it should be, but "pure and undefiled religion" is not prohibited and never will be in any christian nation.

It has been said that to the ignorant, truth and falsehood are all the same. But learn the truth and the truth will make you free; and if free, then happy. The happiness that education has brought to the world in a general way is incalculable. To illustrate: With all the learning of ancient Greece and all heathen nations, for that matter, they were bound by superstition. They interpreted the thunder as the voice of an angry God, the lightning as a mark of His displeasure and a warning of His punishment. Every sudden change in the natural elements caused them to quake and shudder and cower in their secret hiding places. An earth quake, volcanic eruption, the appearance of a meteor or any phenomena out of the ordinary, caused them great mental suffering and many to commit suicide, and why? Because of ignorance. Ignorance in this country effects people in a different way; they learn, in a meager way the meaning of such things as those that used to send consternation to the hearts of the ancient Greeks; but they lose enjoyment in a thousand ways.

Nature is full of beautiful and interesting things but the eyes and ears of the uneducated have not been opened to see and hear.

They have not learned. "To find tongues in trees, books in running brooks, sermons in stones, and good in every thing." Then they do not understand the system of government under which they live, they are suspicious, imagine calamitous happenings. They have a vocabulary composed of so few words that they often fail to understand conversations, lectures, sermons and other addresses that would give them real pleasure to understand. Their world is exceedingly small. Just think of all one knows of this great earth and what it contains being bounded by a circle of actual, personal acquaintance, whose radius is but a few miles! Such a life must be meager indeed. His existence is exceedingly small. Yet how many such have we in Kentucky? Some one has said, "A little learning is a dangerous thing." We are, however, inclined to take the other side of the question and say that even a "little learning" is better than none. And if a little learning—a mere ability to read and write is so valuable, (and all who have it prize it highly) is not more learning abundantly worth seeking after? Our observations has led us to believe that the great majority of pupils in Paris not attending school, are the class that have just a "little learning." They have attended school a few years and now are idling their time away or working for very small wages while time and opportunity that come once, and only once, to every boy and girl to improve the mind are rapidly slipping away and leaving them unprepared for life with its varied and strenuous tasks. How sad to think of such grievous mistakes! Preparing to enjoy life? No but forcing sad regrets upon themselves and posterity for the remainder of their earthly, and perhaps, future existence.

He who has learned to read, and understand and to love good literature, need never feel lonely. He can infuse his life with the thoughts of the witty and wise of the centuries; he can infuse his life not only with the life of the present generation but the life of all humanity; he can add to himself Shakespeare and Emerson, Plato and Paul and thus by sweet communion with great and good souls, continue to grow and enjoy. As Holmes says, where a man stands does not matter much, but the direction he is going in is the important thing.

The public schools do not aim to teach only the essentials of education. Yet with this important duty they purpose to create a "hungering and thirsting" to know more and more so that after leaving school the students will continue to read and improve as long as they live. This is one of the great purposes of the schools. May it be fully realized here.

THE DREAD OF RABIES.

Out of All Proportion to the Frequency of the Disease.

Few accidents are more terrifying to the sufferer than to be bitten by a dog supposed to be mad, and there are few conditions in which prompt and intelligent action on the part of the bystanders is more desirable.

Although nearly all warm blooded animals are susceptible to rabies, it is most commonly seen in dogs. There are two forms—the "furious" and the "dumb." In the furious type after a period of melancholy or depression the animal becomes restless and irritable, with a tendency to run away and snap at everything in sight, finally becoming subdued and sullen and dying of paralysis and exhaustion. In dumb rabies the stage of irritability is absent. The dog prowls about in a listless way, with his head down and lower jaw dropped. At the same time there is difficulty in swallowing.

It is often impossible to tell from a dog's actions whether it is rabid or not. But if instead of killing the animal as quickly as possible, as is often unwisely done, the owner captures it and keeps it for a few days under lock and key the question answers itself. A rabid dog always dies in from four to eight days, so that if the animal recovers the bitten persons may be sure that they are not going to develop hydrophobia.

In any suspicious case the wound should immediately be squeezed under hot water and if deep be incised freely, so that cauterization with either a hot iron or with strong nitric acid (not with lunar caustic) may be thoroughly done. At the same time the dog should be kept under observation, or if already killed the head and neck should be packed in ice and preserved for medical examination.

Even if it seems certain that the animal was rabid the patient should not despair, for it is estimated that only 15 per cent of those bitten by rabid animals actually develop the disease, and if the Pasteur preventive inoculations are promptly begun recovery is almost certain.

The popular dread of rabies is out of all proportion to the relative frequency of the disease, and the length to which it may go is shown by the instances in which people have developed and even died of false hydrophobia, a nervous condition due to fright and simulating to some extent the real malady. — Youth's Companion.

BURNING THE YULE LOG.

A Survival From the Adoration Once Offered to the Sun.

In some parts of Germany the Yule log is placed on the hearth on Christmas eve and if possible kept burning for two or three days. Then a piece of it is laid aside for the purpose of lighting the next year's log and of guarding the household from harm. Pieces of fir wood charred but not quite burned out in the Christmas fire are also placed under the family bed in some German villages to avert the dreaded lightning stroke, which appears in this relation to be the type of fire in its evil aspect, in contradistinction from the solar orb, the representative of beneficent light and warmth. The custom of burning a Yule log for three days and nights in each homestead is almost certainly a survival from the adoration once offered to the sun at the winter solstice.

Three centuries after the Christian era sun worship was still maintained in Brittany, and in Normandy not more than 100 years ago the household fire was extinguished on Dec. 24 and the Christmas log was ignited by the aid of a flame procured from the lamp burning in the neighboring church. This fact affords a curious instance of the probable transference of respect and reverence from the sacred fire of a purely heathen creed to the ecclesiastical lights of Catholicism. When the pagan rites for procuring unslaked fire were forbidden or fell into desuetude the ideas to which they owed their origin and development, instead of perishing, continued to exist more or less perfectly by attaching themselves to usages and ceremonies having no direct association with them.

Rapidly Maturing Plans.

The State Board of Agriculture, which recently purchased the Douglas Park Jockey Club at Louisville for permanent grounds and buildings for the Kentucky State Fair, has not been able to close negotiations because the Title Company employed to clear the title and guarantee it has found that a part of the land bought has been dedicated to public uses, and, therefore, there may be some trouble in closing the roadways; at least there will be a delay of a few months. In the meantime, the Board has asked the owners of Douglas Park to lease them the grounds for holding this year's fair with the understanding that as soon as the title is cleared, the property will be taken over by the State Board. This, Mr. Cella, has declined to do, it is understood, although there is a probability of the matter being adjusted within the next day or two. The State Board is determined that it will not take over the property until the title is perfect. This may mean that the fair this year will be held at Churchill Downs where it was held last year instead of on the home grounds of the State Fair as was hoped.

Under any circumstances, the fair is certain to be held at Louisville on the dates mentioned, and we are asked by the State Fair management to say to our readers that the plans made for the State Fair are maturing rapidly and satisfactorily, and that they can assure every Kentuckian that the fair will be the biggest one ever held in the South in the way of exhibits, departments, in the way of big amusement features, in the way of music and in the way of attendance.

Paris Man Shot in Hip.

The following special was sent to the dailies Saturday from Cynthia: "George Maybrier, of Paris, was shot in Leeblick one day this week. The shooting is clouded in mystery and the particulars are hard to get. Maybrier, accompanied by Clarence and Madge Gray, also of Paris, went to Lee's Lick to gather blackberries where they engaged in a free-for-all fight, Maybrier claiming that the Grays gave him a whipping and shot at him five times, one of the shots striking him in the hip. The Grays then drove to Paris, but Maybrier was taken to Lair where he was placed on a train and taken to Paris."

The parties live in Paris but we are unable to learn anything in regard to the above.

Special Train.

The L. & N. will run a special train from Falmouth to Lexington, August 12th to 17th, inclusive, account Blue Grass Fair. Train leave Paris 9:40 a. m., returning leave Lexington 6 p. m. W. H. HARRIS, Agent.

"Parsifal."

Managers Martin and Embry will make another extensive tour with "Parsifal" this year. Important additions have been made to the cast and a brilliant scenic investiture will be seen. John Lane Connors and Virginia Keating, who scored so decisively in the parts of Parsifal and Kundry, have been re-engaged.

To Prevent Rust.

To keep iron and steel goods from rust, states the Mechanical World, dissolve half an ounce of camphor in one pound of hog's lard; take off the scum, mix as much black lead as will give the mixture an iron color. Iron and steel goods rubbed over with this mixture and left with it on 24 hours, and then dried with linen cloth will keep clean for months.

Pulling Together.

Gov. J. C. W. Beckham, United States Senators James B. McCreary and Thomas H. Paynter, Mayor Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville, and every member of Kentucky's delegation in the lower house of Congress have united in a letter to the members of the Democratic National Committee, requesting them and inviting them to hold the next Democratic Convention in Louisville. The letter points out Louisville's advantages and recites the fact that the city is situated midway between the North and South, easily accessible from every State in the Union, that it possesses the largest auditorium hall in the United States, and has ample hotel accommodations. In the letter all these prominent officials, Democrats and Republicans alike, extend a genuine, hearty, sincere old-fashioned Kentucky invitation and promise the Democrats of the nation that if they hold the convention there they will receive a true Kentucky welcome. All our politicians have united in this common cause.

Car Shortage Anticipated Again.

That the car shortage in Kentucky which came near causing a coal famine last winter, will be even more pronounced during the season of 1906-1907 is the belief of A. T. Siler, a member of the State Railroad Commission.

Mr. Siler says that the demand for coal has been such that the roads have not had a chance to get in condition to anticipate a shortage and that dealers in the cities should stock their yards and prepare for a time when it will be difficult to get coal into the city.

"The situation as it appears to me," he said "is serious. It does not seem as though the car supply will be larger and owing to the general and constant demand it is likely to be even smaller.

The development of the coal regions, while offering a larger supply, is also calling for larger means of transportation, and these the railroads may not be able to furnish."

This is a gentle hint that the price of coal may be expected to soar. The skyrocket tendencies of this commodity are greatly deplored by the public.

Erroneous Report.

The report that Dr. M. H. Davis, of Mayslick, who married Miss Emma Hukill, of this city, suddenly expired while driving an automobile near Blue Licks Sunday was not true. The report caused considerable worry in Paris and much sympathy was expressed for the doctor and his good wife until the matter was cleared up over the telephone.

There was, however, a Dr. Davis, who died of heart failure in his automobile Sunday at Blue Licks. He was from Mayslick. His wife and some friends were in the car with Dr. Davis at the time he died. The death stroke came to him with but slight warning. He remarked to his wife that he felt ill, and asked her to take the wheel and steer the car. Before he could bring the machine to a complete stop he had expired. Mrs. Davis drove the car to the nearest house and called for assistance.

Live Stock Market.

The shipment of live stock to the Eastern markets continues, cattle, hogs and lambs being in excellent condition, with steady prices prevailing. Thos. McClintock & Sons shipped last week 2,000 lambs to Chicago and Jersey City, while several bunches of export cattle averaging 1,400 to 1,500 pounds have found their way to market.

T. J. Redmon bought of Jonas Weil forty-five head of 915-pound feeding cattle at 4 cents per pound and a premium of $1 per head.

Blue Grass Fair.

Amid the cheering of more than 10,000 voices, accompanied by inspiring music, the Blue Grass Fair of 1907 opened auspiciously yesterday afternoon at Lexington. Both the day and the gathering were typically Southern and typically Kentuckian.

Not the least of attractions was that grand old Kentuckian, Col. Henry Watterson, who made the opening address. The welcome which he received would have made any heart glad and his happy response to the sentiment was one of the finest speeches ever heard on any fair grounds. Indeed, as remarked by Hon. W. P. Kimball, who introduced him, he is still the type of the "grand old Kentuckian" if there be a new Kentuckian. Mr. Watterson received many congratulations on his speech when he had finished.

Bourbon Crops.

The weather for threshing wheat, cutting and stacking hay has been very unsatisfactory to our farmers.

A week's weather unaccompanied by showers would practically wind up threshing and stacking of hay in the county and enable farmers to turn their attention along other lines. Wheat fields are becoming very weedy, while shocks of wheat wherever down are sprouting.

Some wheat has been threshed damp and is being rejected by buyers with the result that farmers will be compelled to re-thresh.

Early corn is fast maturing a splendid crop, while late fields under favorable conditions are showing rapid growth.

Earl Ferguson, a prominent farmer residing on the Hume & Bedford pike, said that he had 300 acres of corn and with the rains of the last week would make the best yield of any crop he had raised in recent years.

Hemp cutting is on in earnest, and taken as a whole is up to the average. Some new fields subjected to the ravages of broom rape have already been cut in order to save the crop.

Tobacco is in fair condition and so far had not been affected to any extent by the ravages of worms though growers say the pests are showing up in large numbers. Late tobacco which comprises a considerable portion of the total acreage is presenting a very discouraging outlook and at the best will not make better than a half crop.

Wheat is steady at 85 cents per bushel, while quotations on new hay are lower, several sales being made of baled hay at $12.50 per ton, and as low as $10 being offered and refused.

Quantrell, The Guerilla Chief, Lives.

Bill Quantrell, leader of Quantrell's guerrillas in the Civil War, according to history, died of wounds at a Kentucky hospital after his raiders were cut up, is alive and resides at Quatsino, on the northeast coast of Vancouver Island, under the name of John Sharp, according to a number of people who have conversed with him, says a dispatch from Vancouver, B. C.

J. E. Duffy, a prominent timberman, who recently became interested in the timber land at Quatsino, recognized John Sharp, who is over 70, wiry and gray, as Quantrell. Duffy having been a member of the Michigan cavalry which cut up Quantrell's force. He stated to Duffy that he was correct in his recognition.

Sharp said he had been left as dead, and instead of dying of his wounds at Louisville, as history recorded, had taken a horse, ridden many miles and disappeared. He made his way to South America, living a number of years in Chile, whence he went to Texas, where he engaged in the cattle business, making considerable money, which he exhausted. Then he went to Oregon, where he punched cows and drove cattle over the mountains.

From Oregon he went to British Columbia nearly two decades ago and engaged in logging at different camps of the Northeast coast of Vancouver Island until 10 years ago, when he became a trapper of the Northern coast. Six or seven years ago he went to Quatsino, here he was made carer at the West Vancouver mines.

When J. E. Duffy landed at Quatsino from the steamer Tees he met John Sharp on the beach at Coal Harbors. Duffy looked the old man over and said: "Is that you, Quantrell, you old rascal?"

"Come into the house," said Sharp, and for some hours the two men talked. Sharp stating he was in reality Quantrell, and he talked at length of the raids in Kansas and elsewhere and eagerly listened to Duffy's tales from the point of view of the cavalry in the Union army.

Sharp was most keenly interested in the story of the cutting up of his band, and when his narrator told of how 40 men had been killed tears rolled down the old man's cheeks.

R. E. Montgomery, who is engaged in business at Quatsino and who knew Sharp, or Quantrell, at Ft. Worth, and N. I. Berg, Postmaster at Quatsino, are two others to whom Sharp has stated his identity as Quantrell.

"I might as well admit it," Sharp told both, "It seems that I cannot hide the fact."

The story the old man told to the informant of the Associated Press was that when his band had been cut up he had been bayoneted in the chest and had a bullet wound through the shoulder. The surgeon who looked him over diagnosed that he could not live more than a couple of hours and he had been left so that others with more chance of recovery could be attended to by the overworked surgeons.

While they tended the others he got up, despite his wounds and disappeared. That night, he says, he rode 70 miles. He then took flight to South America.

To Be Rigidly Enforced.

The postal laws prohibiting written messages of any character in merchandise packages or letters on which less than two cents an ounce has been paid are to be enforced more rigidly from now on, and Paris people who have been guilty of such practice should take care in the future. During the last fiscal year postoffice inspectors collected $59,065 for such violations. In thousands of cases a short note or memorandum was placed inside the package of merchandise on which postage was paid at one cent an ounce, while the writing made it necessary that two cents an ounce should have been paid.

Finding that in a great number of cases the offense is due to ignorance of the law, and that the collection of fines usually works hardship to the very poor, especially where written messages are made in returning coupons, tags and certificates for premiums, Postmaster-General Meyer has directed that proper notice be placed in post offices warning the public against such practice.

Children Quarrel While Mother Dies.

Testimony introduced before Judge Lincoln in the Jefferson County Court at Louisville in the contest over the will of Mrs. S. T. E. Ross, tended to show that the differences existing between the children had reached a crisis even before her death.

Mrs. Sophia Riddle, one of the daughters, accused Miss Edith Ross, the principal beneficiary of having assaulted Mrs. Mattie Gault, another sister, breaking two ribs. Mrs. Riddle also charged that her sister, Mrs. Ross, went to the bedside of her dying mother and with a pistol threatened suicide unless she left the bulk of the estate to her. The estate at issue is valued at $40,000. The case was taken under advisement by Judge Lincoln.

Sunland Chief a Winner.

The Kentucky Farmer and Breeder in its account of the Cynthia Fair has the following to say of a Bourbon county stallion:

"Harness stallion four years and over (ten on Sunland Chief; J. R. Fagin second on bay horse by Bracken Chief. Outside the money was Rex Arbuckle, the champion harness stallion at the State Fair in 1905. Rex Arbuckle did not make his usual good showing, but he has been shown hard and had just gotten off the cars. Young Chief, shown by J. W. Brock, of Georgetown, Ky., was a winner last year, defeating Moko Pearl, Rex Arbuckle and others at Lexington, was also outside the money. The winner of this ring is one of the best bred harness stallions in the State, combining the blood of Harrison Chief, Indian Chief, Joe Downing and Peavine. His sire is a full brother to the great Lou Chief."

Sunland Chief also won the blue ribbon at the Georgetown Fair last week.

L. &amp; N. Car Burns.

About 6 o'clock Sunday evening the fire department was called to the passenger depot to extinguish a box car that was on fire. In some manner fire started in an empty car containing some straw that had been used for bedding horses, which was enroute to Paris on a southbound freight. The fire was discovered just before the train reached Paris. It was cut off at once from the rear end of the long train with five other cars in front of it and record breaking time was made to the Paris yards, where it was extinguished by hose being attached to the yard engine. It was a novel sight to see the fast run made across the big bridge and through a portion of the town with the blazing car. It is supposed a spark from the engine caused the straw bedding to ignite.

A Self Annihilated Suitor.

By Jeannette Walden.

Copyright, 1907, by G. D. Daniels.

"A man must be willing not only to efface himself, but to blot himself out of existence if necessary, for my sake." Jean Boyce made this statement without premeditation, driven to it by sheer ennui. It was the third time that she had been called upon to give her reason for not acquiescing in Maurice Ankeney's belief that they were made for each other, and this time she wanted it to be final.

They had just turned the corner into her home street. Jean hastened her steps as she spoke, with a little laugh of impatience.

Maurice Ankeney looked at her first with disappointment in his frank blue eyes, then speculation and at last amusement. "Could you care that much for any one?" he asked coolly.

"Oh, no"—her tone was matter-of-fact—"I couldn't! It isn't in me."

"Oh, I see. You demand it as a complementary quality in others."

He continued his scrutiny of her face as a smart trap with a man and woman in it rounded the corner. The woman—a stoutish blond with a mountain of lavender plumes on her head—was driving.

The warm color that came to Jean's cheeks as she returned the man's recognition deepened as the trap rolled past, for she knew that Maurice was watching her, and she felt the new, strange intensity in his gaze.

As for Ankeney, his expression suddenly became a mixture of calmness and stern determination. "I'll do it!" he exclaimed. And for this apparently eccentric remark he was rewarded by an electrifying look of inquiry from a pair of dark eyes.

"Do what?"

"Efface—I mean extinguish—myself by getting him for you."

The dark eyes became inscrutable.

"If you want Harold Buckley, you shall have him," he continued precipitately as they mounted the steps of

ANOTHER AUTOMOBILE CAME TOOTING UP BEHIND THEM.

Jean Boyce's home. "It will be an easy matter. He is only dazzled by her millions. It's you he really cares for. Madge Racer has no right to buy!"

"Maurice Ankeney, I'll never speak to you again." As Jean faced him with this emphatic announcement her blushes were fully accounted for by her anger.

"All right. I might as well die one way as another," and he was gone.

In the days that followed Jean Boyce had a new experience. Maurice Ankeney had never stayed away so long before, and she had missed him, a condition she had not thought possible.

Still there was the counteracting annoyance of Harold Buckley and the heiress. It is true, she never realized that she cared for Buckley until she found that he was out of her reach.

But Jean's self analysis could go no deeper than this, and her state of mind became chaotic once more, when one afternoon Harold Buckley called.

Jean's resentment was not wholly dispelled by Buckley's keenly correct valuation of the heiress. "She was fishing for a husband," he said, "and it's a good thing just to know such women. It makes one expert at estimating character."

Jean interpreted this last remark, "A man does not need to be bitten more than once," and she found herself wondering why she did not feel flattered by his confidence. Still she felt gratified by her triumph in bringing him back. She did not understand until afterward why his next remark quenched her elation.

"She has Maurice Ankeney on her hook now, or, rather, he took her by storm. I never saw a fellow maneuver so." He spoke contemptuously. "But he's welcome."

"How small of him," observed Jean. Then all at once she thought of Maurice's strange promise to her, and she wondered—No, it could not be. He only wanted a cloak for his mercenary ambitions.

Jean did not feel altogether complimented by the ease with which Harold assumed his old relations. Still, when he asked her to take an automobile ride that same evening she accepted.

Her pride in Harold Buckley's personal attractiveness was extended to his splendid machine as they went bounding over the road with a red October sunset in their faces.

Another automobile came tooting up behind them and passed them on the road. It was occupied by Madge Racer and Maurice Ankeney.

The vague depression that had been haunting Jean became poignant. She felt misused.

"Queer taste he has," she observed, with a curl of her lip. Then to hide her pique she conjured a spirit of daring.

"Oh, let's pass them! Do, do!"

Harold Buckley, ready to please her or possibly for reasons of his own, entered into the sport and put on power with great abandon.

Jean was almost delicious with the excitement of swift motion. "How jolly!"—Then came a sudden jolting and a desperate adjusting of brakes. They had struck a rocky place in the road.

Before Harold could slow up Jean was almost shaken from her seat. The sun's rays, on a level with their eyes, blinded them. There was a loud report, a scream from Maurice Ankeney's auto, which they had grazed in stopping, and they toppled over into a shallow ditch, with an extra tire hanging to one of their wheels.

Jean felt a sharp pain in her arm as she picked herself up; then the diversion of what followed made her forget herself. The blond heiress followed up her screams by an attack upon Harold, who had just extricated himself whole from the ditch.

"Mr. Buckley, this is a great way to drive!" she cried in her high voice with its slightly foreign accent. "Why don't you look at your road?"

But she was instantly mollified by Harold's abject apologies and shook hands with him quite sweetly.

Maurice, who had got to work without loss of time, had almost finished putting on a new tire when Jean felt so faint that she had to sit down on the grass. The pain was coming back into her wrist.

It was just then that Maurice Ankeney happened to look over his shoulder. He burst out roughly to Harold, who was still busy with the heiress, "Don't you see the girl is hurt?"

He got to her first, but in a second they were all bending over her. She assured them that it was only a sprained wrist.

Maurice gave Buckley his handkerchief, ordering him to bandage the injured arm tight, and flew back to work again at the tire.

Jean received a feverish impression through her pain that there was a parley and almost an altercation. Maurice seemed to be out of patience with everybody, and the heiress played him a close second. Jean couldn't see all the time, but she heard Madge Racer's voice grow shriller and shriller.

"No, Mr. Buckley must take the back seat with Miss Boyce. I'll ride in front."

But Mr. Buckley said that some one must stay with the disabled machine. It came hastily to Jean that he suggested Maurice as the one to do this. At this Madge Racer insisted that they take Buckley's auto in tow.

After what seemed hours to Jean she felt herself lifted up in somebody's arms, and the next thing she knew the wind of rapid motion against her face brought everything clear to her. Maurice at her side looked back grimly over his shoulder and swore under his breath.

"All right?" he questioned, seeing her looking at him. "Guess I surprised them this time. She thought I was going to wait to take Buckley in tow, with you about to keel over there on the ground."

"But I didn't keel over." Her voice sounded far away.

"Oh, no, you didn't. You're game. I'd like to see the heiress in the same fix."

There was so much of genuine admiration in his look and tone that Jean took new strength for a moment. She must have been weak, too, or she would not have said what she did next.

"Do—do you really care for her money?"

Maurice gave her a sharp, quick look. "You must be out of your head," he muttered as he bent again over the guide wheel.

When he was ready to leave her at home, after the sprain had been cared for and the color was creeping back into her cheeks, he stood over her couch and asked humbly:

"Am I sufficiently blotted out?"

"I think you are," she laughed.

"But I'd like you to be sure," he insisted.

"I am sure," declared Jean, and the look that came into his blue eyes told her that he was satisfied.

Trespass Notices.

"Here is a curious notice which appears on a sign near Saddleworth church, known to fame as the burial place of the victim of the Bills of Jack's murder," writes a Manchester correspondent. "It is a bold attempt to escape the conventional that imposes itself on other property owners: 'The law comes down with a heavy penalty on any person found trespassing on this land.'"

It is only a verbal improvement on the time honored falsehood, "Trespassers will be prosecuted." We prefer the authoritative announcement that used to appear in the grounds at a certain learned judge's country place in the last century. It ran: "Trespassers cannot be prosecuted unless they pursue game or do willful damage. But reasonable force may and will be used to remove trespassers, and they are liable to an action at common law."

It is said that this notice, displayed at various points on the judge's frontiers, so terrorized the countryside that for years there was not so much as a beef tin or an old newspaper caught on the wrong side of the fence.

Dan's Business Course.

By JAMES BRUCE.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

"But that was downright dishonest," said Dan.

"It was businesslike," corrected Phillips. "Mason should not have announced his plans. He bragged about them, and if Bray jumped in and got ahead of him it simply shows Bray's superior business ability."

"That is why you prefer Bray as a son-in-law?" queried Dan. "You want Mabel to marry a business manager, as it were?"

"That is rather a blunt way of putting it," said Phillips uneasily. "It would be better to say that Bray's business qualifications are a point strongly in his favor."

"While my lack of them is to my discredit?"

"You do not have the knack of seizing your opportunities," said Phillips. "Now, take my case. I know that the Smelter and Exploration company purposes getting concessions in Borona. I am going to take a run down there and get the railroad franchise through Camar. Camar is on the coast, and the company will have to pay me well for what will cost me practically nothing. That is business. You might enlarge your fund of geographical information, but it would never occur to you to profit by what you learn."

"There's hope yet," said Dan lightly as he rose. "Meanwhile I am to understand that your consent to my marriage with Mabel is refused?"

"Withheld," corrected Phillips. He never gave a definite answer when he could help it. "Perhaps in the future"—Dan nodded. Perhaps in the future his uncle might make him his heir.

John Phillips turned to his desk, with the consciousness of an unpleasant episode cleverly closed. It was not until the next morning that his eyes were opened. Mabel had run away. "I have gone with Dan," she wrote. "I want a husband, not a valuable addition to the firm of Phillips & Kent."

Phillips shrugged his shoulders and went his way. Deep in his heart her desertion hurt, but with several big operations pending he could not afford to waste time. He shut his ears to the talk of his associates, but as the days went on and Dan and Mabel did not appear to ask parental forgiveness his anxiety grew. He had supposed that when the honeymoon was over they would come back. He was almost tempted to delay his trip to Camar.

But there was no one else in the firm who spoke Spanish well enough to be trusted with the negotiations, and so the Mabel, his luxuriously appointed yacht, slipped down the bay and in due course of time anchored in the landlocked harbor of Porveda.

It took him two days to gain an audience with the president of the tiny republic, for there had just been a revolution, and matters were slow in straightening out. Alvadora, the new president, spoke English haltingly, but English he would speak, and Phillips, tactful, but impatient, chafed inwardly at the delay. He spoke Spanish dutifully, and in ten minutes he could have approached the subject had the president held to his native tongue, but this was precisely what the president would not do.

"I speak English. Is it not so?" he cried. "Bonato not one word could he believe it was, since I first met you. For several months after that I only saw you occasionally; then gradually, very gradually, I increased my visits. It took six months to get on a formal calling basis; it took six months more to be a regular visitor; six months more to call you by your Christian name, and it is only during the last few months that I have ventured, with many misgivings, even to hold your hand. And now, after all this gradual development of my love, you tell me that my declaration is so sudden. Do you call this sudden?"

"I do, indeed," she replied calmly. "But for what reason?"

The young lady replied, with some degree of hauteur:

"Simply this: I hardly imagined you would dare to speak to me like this for another two years at least, considering your present salary."—Pearson's.

official of state, but of commerce," persisted Phillips.

"My friend," pleaded the president, "let us not argue. See my business manager in the morning. Look; I shall send him to you. Yes?"

"Thank you," said Phillips. "But meanwhile let me show you the advantage of such a proposition."

Alvadora waved him off. Business matters were for the business manager. He was the president. It was not well that he should interfere.

Phillips went away thoroughly disgusted, and his bad temper held the next morning as he waited at the hotel for the advent of this mysterious official, nor did his wrath cool when a card was brought to him and he read, "Daniel Carter Curtis, Business Manager, Republic of Camar."

"I have been instructed by the president that you wished to see me in the matter of some concession," said Dan as he entered resplendent in white flannel. "I presume that it has to do with the project that we discussed in your office not long ago."

"How the devil did you get here?" demanded Phillips blankly.

"Dickie Etern had his yacht at Palm Beach. He brought us over," explained Dan. "You seemed irritated that I had not jumped Mason's scheme, so I came down here to get in on this railroad matter."

"And brought Mabel with you?"

"Mrs. Curtis hopes that you will do us the honor of dining with us this evening."

"I'll be hanged if I do!" stormed Phillips. "This caps the climax. You steal my daughter and my ideas and then calmly invite me to dine with you as though nothing had happened."

"Then do not let us air our private quarrel," suggested Dan. "You want a concession. Alvadora is pleasantly impressed by your appreciation of his English and has instructed me to be as liberal as is consistent with safeguarding the interests of the republic."

"I could have got the concession for a song if you had not interfered," stormed Phillips, "but your underhand action!"

"Hold on!" said Dan. "You told me that was good business. To quote your own words, Mason had no business to announce his plans. Neither had you. I came down here and found that Bonato, the then executive, did not see my scheme, so I helped the revolutionists along and got the job from Alvadora. I get one-third on all foreign concessions. I think I'll make a good thing out of it."

"You overthrew the president?" gasped Phillips. "It was your work?"

"It was easy," said Dan modestly. "They had been talking of it before I came along. I just helped 'em to put it through. You see, Bonato was in the way."

"And you induced Mabel to elope with you?"

"She did not want to marry a man for his business qualifications alone," explained Dan. "That interview convinced her that you would not accede to my request, so we were married and started down here for our honeymoon. We rather thought you would be glad to see how well I had developed your suggestion."

"I guess I am," said Phillips weakly. "You can tell her that I shall be over tonight, and, Dan, I take back all I said about your capacity for business. You make out a concession on what you think is a fair basis, and I'll sign. I'm getting old, my boy, and I have had shock enough for one day."

Hint For Book Lenders.

A book borrower's album is the device which a woman who has a fine library has employed in order that she may keep track of her books and that her friends may not be delinquent in returning them. She delighted in lending her books, but was far from pleased in punishing her friends up for their return. Now when a friend asks the loan of a book she acquiesces readily enough, but requests the borrower to write in the album his or her name and the date on which the book is borrowed. On returning it the borrower is asked to comment on the book and initial it. This album always is kept in a conspicuous place in the drawing room, where visitors are likely to pick it up and glance it through, learning who is not prompt in returning books.

The result is that this woman now has her books returned promptly, as the borrowers know they will be convicted in the album if they are delinquent. They take kindly to the plan, the lender does not have to prod them for the return of the books, and she has an album which is valuable to her as containing the comments of her friends on the treasures in her library.—New York Press.

Her Fatal Objection.

"This is so sudden!"

As he heard the girl speak these words the astonished young man rose to his feet in bewilderment.

"Sudden?" he repeated. "Did I hear aright? More than two years ago, I believe it was, since I first met you. For several months after that I only saw you occasionally; then gradually, very gradually, I increased my visits. It took six months to get on a formal calling basis; it took six months more to be a regular visitor; six months more to call you by your Christian name, and it is only during the last few months that I have ventured, with many misgivings, even to hold your hand. ### A QUEER ISLAND.

No Bottom Found In Any of the Wells Bored in Curacao.

Curacao is one of the queerest little islands in the Caribbean sea. It lies sixty miles north of Venezuela, is about sixty miles long and twelve or fourteen miles wide, and it has a population of more than 50,000.

There is no means of procuring fresh water on the island except by saving rainwater in reservoirs. A number of wells have been bored under the supervision of the Dutch government, to which it belongs, but each ended in a failure.

A curious statement regarding these borings is made by the inhabitants of the island. They say that in each and every case after a certain depth was reached the tools dropped out of sight, indicating that there is no solid foundation to the island. The borings were made in low places and through hills and in about thirty different places, each with the same ultimate result. A few wells have been dug to a lesser depth and brackish, unpleasant tasting water is obtained, fit only for manufacturing purposes.

The approach of the rainy season is always an interesting time. The water in the reservoir is low at this time, and the natives eagerly await the opportunity to gather a fresh supply. Clothing is never washed there in fresh water, but at all hours of the day the beach is alive with women beating the clothes with clubs on the rocks.—Buffalo News.

INOPPORTUNE DEATHS.

Men Who, Had They Lived, Might Have Changed History.

Julius Caesar was assassinated when he had almost completed the task of consolidating the administration and dominion of the Roman empire, and his death opened the way to that despotism and corruption which ultimately undid his work. Henry of Navarre was killed when he had almost healed the differences between Catholic and Protestant which subsequently rent not only France, but Europe, and William the Silent also fell when he was on the point of uniting the Netherlands provinces into a compact barrier against the encroachments of Spain.

In English history Lord Clive died at the moment when he was the one man who could have saved the American colonies and kept the Anglo-Saxon race united. But there is the case of Mirabeau. He was literally the one man in France who could have averted the horrors of the revolution, saved and reformed the monarchy and so spared Europe the murderous career of Napoleon and all the devastation it brought. If he had lived ten or even five years longer, the history not only of France, but of Europe and the world, would have been different. It is, in fact, sufficient to say that he would have made both Robespierre and Napoleon impossible.—Strand Magazine.

A Great Leveler.

Have you ever thought what a great leveler the telephone is? You would never think of meeting some dignitary of church or state or some great society lady on the street and address either with a familiar "Hello!" It would be unpardonable rudeness, and yet that is what you do daily when you use the telephone, and nothing is thought of it. The judge on the bench, the governor in his office, the busy coupon clipper at his desk, the overworked clerk, the lady in her boudoir, the artisan at his lathe, are all slaves to that democratic "Hello!" It matters not who may be on the other end of the wire.—Stanberry Owl.

The Old Commercial Instinct.

"What do you think of this table, William?" asked Mrs. Newlyrich, pointing proudly to the antique piece she had purchased. "What did you pay for it?" granted her Bill of "without any money" days. "One hundred dollars, dear." "I think you ought to have been able to buy a new one for that," returned her unantiquarian informed spouse, casting a reflective and scrutinizing glance over the ancient piece of furniture.—New York Herald.

A Wrong Steer.

A mathematical professor had been invited by a city friend to visit him at his residence in a certain square and had promised to do so. Meeting him some time afterward, the friend inquired of the professor why he did not come to see him.

"I did come," said the mathematician, "but there was some mistake. You told me that you lived in a square, and I found myself in a parallelogram, so I went away again."

The Point of View.

"You can't get in here on a half ticket," exclaimed the doorkeeper at the circus.

"I thought I could," apologized the small town citizen. "I have a bad eye, and I only expected to see half of the show."

"Then you'll have to get two tickets," said the doorkeeper. "If you only have one good eye it'll take you twice as long to see the show."—Harper's Weekly.

The Supreme Test.

"That seemed such a queer marriage of Robinson's. How did he come to select his bride?" "He found they had kept the same rook in the family for twelve years."—Baltimore American.

A Broad Hint.

Fred—Last night as you stood in the moonlight I couldn't help but think how much I would like to kiss you. Freda—Well, the poet says, "The thought of yesterday is the action of today."—Pick-Me-Up.

LETTING A FLAT.

The Agent Found There Were Two Sides to the Question.

The agent of the building did not like the looks of the man who wanted to rent the second floor flat.

"We require the payment of the rental monthly in advance, of course," he said.

"That will be all right," answered the man. "The rooms suit me, and I am willing to pay a year in advance if necessary."

"You don't object to music perhaps? There's a piano on the first floor and a harp and zither on the third."

"No objection to that. I am fond of all kinds of music."

"We don't take renters who have children, you know."

"We haven't any. My family consists of my wife, myself and a grown son."

"Also we require the best of references."

"Here they are."

The agent looked at them and handed them back.

"They are all right. I'll have to let you in. You are fortunate, Mr. Spindoo, in getting the apartment at this particular time. By order of Mr. Hunks I have had all the rooms thoroughly—"

"Does old Hunks own this building?"

"Certainly. As I was saying—"

"Great Scott! The only object I have in moving is to get out of one of old Hunks' apartment houses. I wouldn't live here rent free. No, thanks; I can find my way out without any assistance. Morning, sir."—Chicago Tribune.

THE STRAWBERRY.

It Was First Cultivated by a Blind King of Hungary.

Where Eperies, the picturesque Hungarian town, is now surrounded by beautiful gardens and fruited fields there was at the time of King Bela II. nothing but thick wilderness. Once this blind and unhappy sovereign was traveling in his realm. It was a hot, sultry summer day, and while searching for a shady spot in which to rest he became lost. Dead tired in consequence of his long wandering, he asked his attendants for a drink of water. They seated him on the soft, green grass in the cool shade of big old trees, and then the cavaliers separated to hunt for a refreshing spring. Meanwhile the king wanted to find out more about his resting place and began to grope about him with his hands. Thus he discovered strawberries growing all about him, says the New York Herald. He ate them; so, partly quenching his thirst, he waited quietly for his gentlemen. After a short time they returned, some with empty cups, some with pearly spring water.

The king then said to his attendants: "Have the trees cut down around this place where my hands found the refreshing strawberries. Here shall rise a town whose name shall be Eperies (strawberry) in remembrance of this day for all time."

As the king commanded so it was. The wilderness was cleared, and in its place is a town whose arms carry the strawberry even today.

His Idea of Scoring.

At a country cricket match in Lancashire a local farmer's boy was appointed scorer, his duties being carefully explained to him. The first inning was not very productive of runs and soon came to an end, and every one made a rush for the scorer. Judge of their surprise, however, when they found that not a single mark had been made in the carefully ruled book that had been provided.

When reproached in somewhat strong terms the boy was not in the least disconcerted, but with the most ingenious air in the world said:

"I was so interested in the sport that I quite forgot to mark the crosses. But it disna matter—that wee liddle wi' the red face is the smartest runner among ye."—London Tit-Bits.

Arms and the Tax.

There are sufficient people in England and Scotland paying the annual tax imposed by the inland revenue upon the use of armorial bearings to produce a sum of $350,000 each year. The great bulk of this sum is paid by people who care not an atom either about their family of their arms, but pay the tax regularly simply because they have carriages or plate heraldisically decorated. The really old families of the realm, however, use armorial emblems for decorative purposes to an extent almost incredible in the eyes of those familiar with them only on note paper, table silver and carriage panels.

A Curiosity.

Polite Shopman (showing goods)—Here is something I would like to call your attention to, madam. It is the very latest thing out. Mrs. Rounder (absently)—If there's anything out later than my husband I'll take it, if only for a curiosity.—Strand Magazine.

A Fellow Feeling.

"I don't believe," said Mrs. Henry Peck, "that I would be afraid of a man eating tiger." "I don't believe you'd need to, M'ria," responded Hen Peck. "He'd recognize a kindred spirit."—Houston Post.

No Ballast Needed.

A dear old lady, on reading that several aerolites weighing five hundred-weight each had fallen in the Ghazipur district of India, remarked that these balloonists appeared to be astonishingly heavy people.—Punch.

At the end of some generations races perish or degenerate in towns. It is necessary to renew them, and it is always the country which furnishes this renewal.—Rousseau.

The Badge of Honesty

Is on every wrapper of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery because a full list of the ingredients composing it is printed there in plain English. Forty years of experience has proven its superior worth as a blood purifier and invigorating tonic for the cure of stomach disorders and all liver ills. It builds up the run-down system as no other tonic can in which alcohol is used. The active medicinal principles of native roots such as Golden Seal and Queen's root, Stone and Mandrake root, Bloodroot and Black Cherrybark are extracted and preserved by the use of chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce at Buffalo, N. Y., for free booklet which quotes extracts from well-recognized medical authorities such as Drs. Bartholow, King, Scudder, Coe, Ellingwood and a host of others, showing that these roots can be depended upon for their curative action in all weak states of the stomach, accompanied by indigestion or dyspepsia as well as in all bilious or liver complaints and in all "wasting diseases" where there is loss of flesh and gradual running down of the strength and system.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" makes rich, pure blood and so invigorates and regulates the stomach, liver and bowels, and through them, the whole system. Thus all skin affections, blotches, pimples and eruptions as well as scrofulous swellings and old open running sores or ulcers are cured and healed. In treating old running sores, or ulcers, it is well to insure their healing to apply to them Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve. If your druggist don't happen to have this Salve in stock, send fifty-four cents in postage stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and a large box of the "All-Healing Salve" will reach you by return post.

You can't afford to accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic, medicine or xerous composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules, easy to take as candy.

Neighbors Got Fooled.

"I was a little ally coughing myself to death, and had become too weak to eat my bed; and neighbors predicted that I would never leave it alive; but they got fooled, for thanks be to God, I was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery. It took just four one dollar bottles to completely cure my cough and restore me to good sound health," writes Mrs. Eva Uncapher, of Grovertown, Stark county, Ind. This King of cough and cold cures, and healer of throat and lungs is guaranteed by Oberdorfer, the druggist. 50c and $1 Trial bottle free.

Rising From The Grave.

A prominent manufacturer, Wm. A. Fertilizer, of Luncama, N. C., relates a most remarkable experience. He says: "After taking less than three bottles of Electric Bitters, I feel like one rising from the grave. My trouble is Bright's disease in the diabetes stage. I fully believe Electric Bitters will cure me permanently, for it has already stopped the liver and bladder complications which have troubled me for years." Guaranteed at Oberdorfer's, the druggist. Price only 50 cents.

THE THIRD HOUSE.

Legislative Annex of the Special Interests in Congress.

The third house, as the lobby is sometimes called, is the legislative annex of the special interests. It is the house of special representatives, and its membership is a curious study in the widely different.

Its meeting place is the lobby and committee rooms of the nation's capitol, the hotel rotunda, the lawyer's office, the street, the banquet room, the little back room, the bar, the road house, the home, the brothel—anywhere the legislator may be found and personally approached. That is the object of a lobby—personal contact with the people's representatives and the influence upon legislation worked thereby.

If legislators were perfect, there would be no lobby. If they were perfectly wise, there would be no occasion for the lobbyist who desires "to inform" them; if perfectly honest, there would be no occasion for the lobbyist who desires to "make it worth while"; if perfectly patriotic, there would be no occasion for the lobbyist who desires for himself "a little personal favor"—at the people's expense. The existence of a lobby is premised on human frailty. It is present to prey on human weakness, to warp the action of the legislative body by appeal to vanity, ignorance, cupidity or fear.—Gilson Gardner in Success Magazine.

Election Contest In Owen.

Charles Marshall, defeated in Owen county for the Democratic nomination for Representative, will contest the election that his successful opponent gave drinks of coco cola to voters at the polls. He charges that this carried the election.

Operator's Strike.

Encouraged by their apparent success in crippling the telegraph system of the country, the striking operators are making preparations to extend the movement into all parts of the United States and Canada. Approximately 4,000 men were out Saturday night.

Takes Hopeful View.

Six thousand people heard Governor Joseph W. Folk, of Missouri, deliver an address at the Seven Hills Chautauqua near Owensboro, Saturday, on "Representative Government."

"Wealth in itself is a blessing," said Governor Folk. "The abuse of wealth is a curse. The people do not object to riches honestly acquired, but have a right to protest against unjust privileges out of which tainted riches grow. No man who is doing an honest business need fear from the arousing of the conscience of the people against wrong. The man or the corporation doing a dishonest business has no right to complain."

"Insurance policies are more valuable to-day by reason of the elimination of grafting on the part of insurance officials. We can eat our meat with more satisfaction since the correction of the evils of the beef packing industry. When railroads are compelled to obey the law the same as any one else it will not retard their development or injure their real progress but will put railroads on a firmer and more substantial basis."

Royally Bred Filly Sold.

W. A. Bacon, proprietor of Maplehurst stock farm, reports the foal of a bay filly by Direct Hal dam Miss Dillard. That the filly is royally bred, one of much promise, is evidence by the fact that the owner of its sire, the Wellsville Driving Park of New York, bought the filly sight unseen for $500 at weaning time. Direct Hal has a record of 2:04 1/2 while the dam, Miss Dillard, is a full sister to Fannie Dillard 2:30 1/2 and Hal B. 2:04.

Lassing May Have Opposition.

Pressure from all over the Sixth Appellate District of Kentucky is being brought to bear upon Judge Samuel Holmes, of Carlisle, to induce him to enter the race for the Republican nomination for Judge of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky to make the race against the Democratic nominee, Judge John Lassing, of Boone county. Judge Holmes is one of the leading attorneys at the Carlisle bar and is popular with the Democrats of Nicholas county as well as the Republicans.

Clay's Ready Wit.

When Henry Clay was stumping Kentucky for re-election at one of his mass-meetings an old hunter of wide political influence, said, "Well, Henry, I've always been for you but because of that vote (which he named) I'm goin' agin you."

"Let me see your rifle," said Clay. It was handed to him.

"Is she a good rifle?"

"Yes."

"Did she ever miss fire?"

"Well, yes, once."

"Why didn't you throw her away?"

Then the old hunter thought a moment and then said, "Henry, I'll try you agin."

And he was elected.

Good Omen For Hager.

State Auditor Hager, the Democratic nominee for Governor, had a narrow escape from death Saturday in a street car accident on the St. Clair street bridge in Frankfort. The car in which he and many others were riding started up the incline at the north end of the bridge at full speed and jumped the track about 20 feet from the end. It crashed into the heavy six-inch oak girder that protects the walkway from the drive way and splintered it.

For a few seconds it seemed that the car could not be checked and that it would plunge over and be crushed on the rocks fifty feet below. The passengers were panic-stricken and began to scramble to get out. At this juncture the car wheels gave an unexpected twist and bumped the car into the heavy steel stringers that connect the floor beams to the upper structure of the bridge. This checked the car and it came to a sudden stop without injuring any one. Judge Hager says the accident is a good omen and means that he was not born to be killed in a street car wreck, but is destined to be the next Governor of Kentucky.

Mild Winter Predicted.

Col. Asa K. Martin, the widely-known weather prognosticator, who on August 1st, usually makes known his weather predictions for the coming winter, is out with his official announcement. According to Forecaster Martin we are to have twenty-six snows the coming winter. The first of them is scheduled to fall on November 11th and the last on May 1st, 1908. His horoscope does not, however, indicate that we are to have a very severe winter in this latitude, as it shows only seven days when the mercury will drop to the zero mark. Three ice spells and one sleet storm are promised, though he is unable to predict just when the sleet may be expected. He concludes his forecast with the prediction that the "entire Republican city ticket in Lexington will win at the November election."

Believe This If You Like.

Here is a touching tale. Get your handkerchief ready: A burglar stole a watch from the home of a Chicago woman. On the case was inscribed "From Mother." The burglar sent the watch back when he noticed the inscription, with a note to the effect that he had once had a mother, boo hoo, also a sister, an aunt and a grandmother, and when he read "From Mother," it so affected him that he could not content himself until the watch was returned.
